United Delivery Riders of Metro Manila

MANILA, PHILIPPINES

Subject: Our Claims to FoodTiger

No delivery is worth a rider's safety.

Behind every order on the FoodTiger app is a real person.

Delivery riders travel through traffic, extreme heat, heavy rain and flooded streets to bring food to customers across Metro Manila. We use our own time, mobile data, fuel and motorcycles to complete every delivery. Many of us continue working in dangerous conditions because our daily income depends on the number of orders we complete.

We keep FoodTiger moving. We deserve fair pay, safe working conditions and respect. If FoodTiger ignores these concerns, it risks service disruptions, rider protests and a loss of trust among riders, customers and restaurant partners.

What Riders Are Facing

FoodTiger has reduced the payment riders receive for each delivery. At the same time, riders are expected to meet the same delivery-time targets during both dry and rainy weather.

This is not fair or realistic.

During heavy rain and flooding, roads become dangerous and traffic becomes slower. Riders need more time and fuel to complete each delivery. However, when an order arrives late, customers may leave a bad rating or make a complaint.

These ratings can lead to fewer delivery offers or even account suspension. As a result, riders may feel forced to choose between their safety and their income.

No worker should have to make that choice.

These concerns are supported by research. A 2023 DOLE–OSHC study of 130 delivery riders in Metro Manila found that nearly half earned between ₱10,001 to ₱20,000 per month. The study also found that 68% worked more than eight hours a day, 48% worked seven days a week, 91% had no formal employment contract and 40% had experienced work-related injuries (Sta Ana et al., 2023). In addition, the 2025 Fairwork Philippines report found insufficient evidence that any of the nine platforms studied guaranteed workers the local minimum wage after costs such as fuel, mobile data and vehicle maintenance were deducted (Fairwork, 2025).

Our Five Claims

The United Delivery Riders of Metro Manila calls on FoodTiger to take the following actions:

1. Provide Fair and Transparent Pay

FoodTiger must provide fair payment for every delivery and clearly explain how rider payments, incentives and deductions are calculated.

The recent reduction in delivery payments should be reviewed together with UDRMM. Riders should not earn less while fuel, mobile data and motorcycle maintenance costs continue to reduce their actual income.

2. Adjust Delivery Times During Dangerous Weather

Delivery-time targets must reflect actual road and weather conditions.

During heavy rain, flooding or other dangerous situations, riders should receive more time to complete their deliveries. FoodTiger should also introduce clear rules for pausing deliveries in areas where it is unsafe to continue working.

FoodTiger should also work with MMDA to use live traffic, flooding and weather data when adjusting delivery routes and delivery-time targets.

3. Protect Riders from Unfair Ratings and Account Suspensions

Riders should not receive bad ratings, fewer orders or account penalties because of delays caused by heavy rain, flooding, road closures or severe traffic.

FoodTiger must provide a clear and fair appeal process before suspending a rider's account. Each case should be reviewed by a person, not decided only by an automated system.

4. Provide Bad-Weather Allowance and Safety Support

Riders working in difficult weather should receive additional payment for the extra time, fuel and risk involved.

FoodTiger should also provide basic safety support, including reflective equipment, rain protection, accident assistance and clear emergency information.

5. Meet and Negotiate with UDRMM

FoodTiger must recognize riders as important partners and listen to their experiences.

We ask FoodTiger management to meet with UDRMM and begin an open and honest negotiation about pay, safety, ratings and account suspensions. Riders must be included in decisions that directly affect their work and lives.

We Want Dialogue, Not Conflict

FoodTiger has suggested that better working conditions could increase costs and may cause the company to reduce its operations in Metro Manila.

Our message is clear: we are not asking FoodTiger to leave.

We want FoodTiger to stay, provide a reliable service and succeed in Metro Manila—but not at the cost of riders' safety and dignity.

Fair pay and safe working conditions can benefit everyone. Riders can work more safely, customers can receive more reliable service, restaurants can build stronger relationships with the platform, and FoodTiger can earn greater public trust.

A Message to FoodTiger

We are not only numbers, ratings or moving icons on an app.

We are workers. We are family members. We are members of our communities. Every rider deserves to return home safely after work.

FoodTiger depends on riders every day. It is time to listen to us, respect us and work with us.

Meet with UDRMM. Hear our voices. Let us build a safer and fairer delivery system together.

No delivery is worth a rider's safety.

Safe Delivery. Fair Delivery.
